

Unheeded Gifts.

They placed rare lilies in her hands—Roses that scarce had touched a flower;
And on my rose-buds, whose perfume Embalmed her for her funeral hour.
They wrapped her form in lustrous silk,
And draped soft folds of filmy lace About the slender, pulseless wrists, And underneath the patient face.
I laid her in perfect rest; While soles, in low to low to praise, Rehearsed her many virtues o'er,
And spoke of all her pleasant ways.
The sleeper heeded not the wealth Of bloom that lay within her hands;
And not a word of love or loss Her sealed ears could understand.
Strange, we so often keep the flowers To lay in folded hands at last;
And while the patient face is past, Still think of them as things of the past!
Strange that we do not often praise
The willing toiler by our side; Why keep the full-blown flower of love Until the friend we loved has died?

GRAINS.

The tongue is not steel, yet it cuts.
A cheerful face is nearly as good for an invalid as fine weather.
It is better to be able to say "no" than to be able to read Latin.
Cold air is not necessarily pure, nor warm air necessarily impure.
Advice is like castor oil, easy enough to give, but hard enough to take.
There are men whose friends are more to be pitied than their enemies.
Wealth may bring luxuries, but that luxuries do not always bring happiness.
Grand temples are built of small stones, and great lives made of trifling events.
Give what you have. To some one it may be better than you dare to think.
An open mind, an open hand, and an open heart, would everywhere find an open door.
It is not enough to keep the poor in mind; give them something to keep you in mind.
Prayer will make a man cease from sin, or sin will entice a man to cease from prayer.
Be loving, and you will never want for love; be humble, and you will never want for guiding.
When a man dies, people generally inquire what property he has left behind him. The angels will ask, what good deeds has he sent before him?

We should be careful how we create enemies; if being one of the hardest things in the Christian religion to behave ourselves as we ought towards them.
Conscience like any other faculty should be carefully cultivated, especially as the light of nature is so much impaired and public opinion is so much debauched.
There is no sadder picture in this world than the daily strife and contentions of men. We are but creatures of a day and know that others must soon take our places:
"Ah! yet we cannot be kind to each other each other's sinners."
We whisper and hint, and chuckle, and grin at each other's shame;
"We have it out; we men are a little brood."
When you desire holiness more than anything else in this world, it is near at hand. "And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." There can be no good without a strong will. A weak will means inconstancy; it means it even in good attempts and relinquished, which is always a terrible thing, because it betrays some one who relied upon it.
It is not the smallest use to try to make people good unless you try at the same time, and they feel that you are trying, to make them happy.
And you rarely can make another happy unless you are happy yourself.
"Our life is a dream; our time, as a stream, glides swiftly away."
And the temptations of the world, the flesh, and the devil, are all gone;
"The million year, and eternity's here."
"Still keep the path which duty bids ye tread, Though worldly wisdom shake the cautious head."
No truth from Heaven descends upon our senses.
Without the greeting of the skeptic's sneer; Denied and mocked at, till its blessings fall, Common as dew and sunshine, over all.

The great temptation to which we are more or less exposed, is that of losing sight of God in the ordinary actions of the day. It is hard to feel that every action of every day is capable of being so done as to advance or hinder our growth in grace.
It is as supreme folly to talk of a little sin as it would be to talk of a small decadence that forbids it, or of a shallow hell that will punish it. Sin is registered according to heavenly measurements of holiness and majesty.

The Obedient Boy.

I read a very pretty story the other day about a little boy who was sailing a boat with a playmate a good deal larger than he was.
The boat had sailed a good way out in the pond, and the big boy said, "Go in Jim, and get her. It isn't over your ankles, and I've been in after her every time."
"I daren't," said Jim. "I'll carry her all the way home for you, but I can't go in there; she told me not to."
"Who's she?"
"My mother," said Jim, softly.
"Your mother? Why I thought she was dead," said the big boy.
"That was before she died. Eddie and I used to come here and sail boats, and she never let us come unless we had string enough to haul in with. I ain't afraid you know I'm not; only she didn't want me to, and it can't do it."

Neighbors Jones and Smith.

Orren Hutchinson in Brooklyn Times happily illustrates our danger and defence.
"The danger of an attack from foreign nations may be illustrated by supposing that Mr. Smith and Mr.
Jones have been living on the best of neighborly terms for many years. Mr.
Smith, being a grocer, supplies Mr. Jones with all he wants in his line, while Mr. Jones is equally happy in supplying the family of Mr. Smith with dry goods. Moreover, as they live in adjoining houses, each with ample grounds devoted to cultivation of flowers, both families enjoy the beauty of each other's flower garden as often as they choose to look from their respective windows. At length Mr.
Smith begins to imagine how easy it would be for Mr. Jones to smash in the windows on that side of the house if he were so disposed, and straightway proceeds to build a stone wall between the two houses, so high that it would be impossible for Mr. Jones to stone his windows. We can readily imagine that the hitherto warm friendship and pleasant relations between these two families would be somewhat chilled by such conduct on the part of Mr. Smith, and the other neighbors would probably question his wisdom in acting under the influence of such groundless fears." [In the same line it may be added that revolvers carried in the pockets of the Smiths and occasionally flourished or discharged in the direction of the Jones house would not increase friendliness.]

Chinese New Year.

The Courier-Journal gives a very interesting account of the celebration of the Chinese New Year in Louisville, from which we take the following, and specially commend the sentiment to our Christian readers. Think of a heathen not being allowed to participate in the celebration of a national holiday until all his debts are paid. But read the article:
"Yesterday was 'Yuetan,' the Chinese New Year, and it was duly celebrated with perfumed wood and fasting at the residence of Chang Kee in the Law Building basement on Green street, near Center. Si Dione, who is well known as the best educated Chi-naman in the city, being always engaged as interpreter when one is needed, had charge of the ceremonies.
Among those present were Hop Sing, Pang Sam, Sam Wah, Sam Chi, Si Ching, Wah King, Woh Sing and Wing Lee, the latter the oldest Chi-naman in Louisville and the only one who is not a member of the Broadway Baptist Chinese Sunday-school; he declines to attend, declaring that he is too old to learn. There was no session of the school yesterday, as all the scholars wanted to enjoy the New Year's holiday.
"Precisely at the beginning of the New Year's Day the Chinamen bathed in perfumed water, dressed in their nicest clothes and remained at home all day, rejoicing in 'chuntsen,' the wine of spring."
"Your new year," said he, 'dates from Jesus Christ and is numbered 1887. The Chinese new year dates from the reign of the Emperor of China, Teeh-teh, 'Son of Heaven,' and is numbered 13. We have good government, the laws are printed cheaply and given to the people, and the Code is 2,000 years old. New Year is our greatest festival; in China it is celebrated for a whole month, with fun of all kinds, all day long. Here we have only one holiday. Preparatory to our New Year festival, every Chinaman pays all his debts or he can not celebrate."

Is My Heart All Right?

I will give a few of the symptoms of functional heart complaint. It must be premised that so closely do these symptoms often approach in character to those of real valvular or other affects of the heart, that it is no wonder the sufferer therefrom should feel anxious, or that—as he really ought to —he should consult a doctor. It is, nevertheless, a fact to be borne in mind, and one from which nervous people may take some comfort, that those who have the real disorder seldom believe there is anything radically wrong with them, whereas persons with the fictitious complaint, or functional derangement of the heart, are very often found in the physician's waiting-room. It is even possible that the symptoms may be of such a character as to deceive a young or inexperienced medical man, for there may be, and often is, a distinct cardiac bruit; a murmur is got up, as it were—not with the patient's consent, of course—when, if he be at all nervous, he seats himself in the doctor's chair. Besides, the actual pain or suffering in the functional derangement of the heart may be, and often is, greater than that in actual disease of the organ.
The pulse may deceive the patient himself from its irregularity. I do not mean irregularity of beat at any given time, I refer more to the fact of its being sometimes very rapid indeed. It may be an easily excited pulse: lying down in his own chamber, calm as to mind, and restful as to body, the patient may place his fingers on his wrist and be surprised to feel how steadily his heart is 'jogging along'; but suddenly there is a tug at the doorbell, followed by a rat-tat-tat-tat, which shows that some unexpected friend, of no small consequence, is about to make a call. The patient's heart gives a big, uneasy thud, he feels as if he had swallowed a box-heater, red-hot iron and all, and if he tries his pulse now, why, the rat-tat-tat of the door-knocker is nowhere near it in frequency.

God Can See Through the Crack.

A lady came home from shopping one day, and was not met as usual by the glad welcome of her little son. He seemed shy of her, skulked into the entry, hung about the garden, and wanted to be more with Bridget than with common. The mother could not account for his manner.
When she was undressing him for bed, "Mother," he asked, "can God see through the crack in the closet door?"
"Yes," said his mother.
"And can he see when it is all dark there?"
"Yes," answered his mother, "God can see everywhere and in every place."
"Then God saw me, and he'll tell you, mother. When you were gone, I got into your closet, and I took and ate up the cake; and I sorry, I very sorry," and bowing his head on his mother's lap, he burst out a-crying.
Poor little boy! all day he had been wanting to hide from his mother, just as Adam and Eve, after they had disobeyed God, tried to hide from his presence in the garden of Eden. Guilt made them afraid, and guilt made him afraid. It put a gulf between him and his mother. You see how his wrongdoing separated him from her. He was no longer at ease in her sight.
His peace was gone. This is the way sin divides us from God. We don't love to be in his sight. We are not happy there. We hide away from him, and try to forget him. How did George get back to his mother? How did he get rid of his feeling of guilt and shame? He took the best—indeed, he only true—way, by repenting and confessing it. His mother forgave him, no doubt, and he tasted again the sweets of nestling close beside her, and loving to be in her dear society. He was restored to her confidence and love.
Precisely so must we do towards God.
We must repent and confess our sins and pray God for Christ's sake to forgive us. Then we may taste the sweets of forgiveness, and be no longer afraid and far off from him. As a little child is never happier than at its mother's side, so nearness to God is one of the most delightful feelings which can fill the bosom of the child of God.

Meph's Discovery.

In that beautiful suburb of Philadelphia known as Germantown lived a beautiful little gray Syke terrier with a very long name—Mephistopheles.
He was called Meph, for short, and a remarkably intelligent dog he was.
At one time Meph's master, who was a well known physician of Germantown, was ill. In the middle of the night the dog bounded to the side of the bed, and laying his paw upon his master, endeavored to awaken him.
Having succeeded, he tried in various ways to attract his attention to the opposite side of the room, repeatedly leaving the bed and returning. Unwilling to be disturbed, the invalid remained some time without noticing his little pet; but the animal became so importunate that the doctor could no longer remain impassive. He arose, and, following the dog to the bay window on the other side of the room, he found, to his astonishment, that a gold-fish had leaped out of the aquarium, and was panting, almost lifeless, on the carpet.
Meph evinced much joy when his master restored the fish to its watery home, and the doctor fondly caressed Meph, who quietly returned to his cushion-bed, seemingly perfectly satisfied with having performed his mission and saved the life of the fish. He must have evolved the idea that all was not right—that the fish was "out of its sphere."—St. Nicholas.

A Household Fairy.

BY SIDNEY DAYKE.

"If I were only a fairy—well!
"I would take me ever so long to tell Of all the beautiful things I'd do For everybody I loved or knew; Like fairies carried in days of old.
"Mother should have a house as grand As any you see in all the land; A cap of lace and a velvet gown,
And a carriage to ride about the town;
She never should do a thing all day But hold her hand like a lady say;
And all this treasure, treasure work, Which every day I am glad to think,
For I'd have a chance to look and see The minute I waved that wand of mine!
"That's what I'd like to do, but oh!
I'm only a bit of a girl you know!
Working away at homely things,
And not a fairy with shining wings, I haven't a wand, and if I had,
Perhaps the fairies would think it sad To let a girl like me to look and see What a lovely lady I'd be.
"But I have two little hands that know How to do it and mend and sew, And I can do a lot of good to sweep-some, and I'll let you take a peep.
So I'll hurry—no, no, my very best, While mother sits by the fire at rest,
And she will think, if she does not say, One little fairy's alive to-day And for everything that a girl should do Can wave, not one little wand, but two."

For the Ladies.

Ladies, when shopping in Abbeville, might do well to call at the store of the White Brothers and examine their large and attractive stock of dress goods, ranging in price from 10 cents to $1.00 per yard.
Special attention is called to dress goods of low and medium prices. All wool dress goods are never so cheap as they are this season.
White Brothers carry also a large line of ladies' cloaks, consisting of Newmarkets, short wraps and jackets.
A good assortment of ladies' gossamers, and a stock of ladies' shoes that cannot be surpassed. Also, ladies' rubber overshoes which are Call and be suited, and while buying dress goods, and other articles of wearing apparel, remember to look at carpets and rugs, crockery and fancy china.
Buy your red blankets too, from WHITE BROTHERS.

White Brothers.

Have given more attention this season than ever before to ready-made clothing. This part of their business has grown steadily during the last five years, and the liberal patronage of a generous public now warrants them in carrying a stock of ready-made clothing superior of which cannot be found in any town in the State of the size of Abbeville.
They make a specialty of the clothing. Any one desirous of purchasing a nice suit or a fine overcoat cannot fail to be pleased if they will call and examine the elegant assortment of clothing now offered for sale by White Brothers.

The rate per centum of taxes, is as follows:

State purposes..... 5 mills.
County current..... 3 " " County special..... 1 " "
Schools..... 2 " "

Total..... 10 1/2 " "
Poll tax $1.00.
Male citizens between twenty-one and fifty years of age are liable to Poll tax.

Tax payers in Ninety-Six and Cokesbury townships are notified that the tax to pay the interest on the Bonds in aid of the Atlantic, Greenville and Western Railway, amounting to 3 mills in Ninety-Six and 3 1/2 mills in Cokesbury township will be collected at the same time as the State and County taxes, and will be subject to the same penalties in case of non-payment.

In order to further the collection of the taxes I have arranged the following schedule of appointments (subject to changes in Railroad schedules) and request the tax payers to take due notice thereof, as the office at the Court House will necessarily be closed on those days:
